Renaissance Art & Print

Name _____ Date _____

1 Recall, then make a connection.

Start from memory. Write a meaning or quick example for each term.

Linear perspective	Classical reference	Print

Distinguish linear perspective, classical reference, and print. Explain how one work could combine these features, and why technique alone does not identify its religious or civic purpose.

Context for the task

Renaissance art and learning included varied interests in classical antiquity, observation, human experience, and methods for representing space. These features did not appear identically in every work or region. Religious subjects remained prominent. Identifying one feature is the beginning of interpretation, not proof that every characteristic belongs to every object.

2 Work with the numbers.

The print run

A fictional workshop makes 12 impressions from each of 4 prepared blocks. Assume each block produces its stated quantity without spoilage.

How many impressions are produced?

Show your calculation. Label the quantities you use.

Answer: _____ impressions

What can this result show? What would need more evidence?

Evidence, application & transfer.

3 Read the evidence closely.

Did an image circulate?

A historian claims a printed design influenced workshops in more than one region.

Select all evidence relevant to that claim.

A. A dated print is documented in a workshop in another region.

B. A later work adapts a distinctive feature from that print, with supporting provenance.

C. A modern viewer says both works are attractive.

D. The two works have the same frame size.

Selections: _____ Explain your reasoning:

4 Apply the idea.

Repair the checklist

A label reads: "Every Renaissance work was secular, realistic, and identical in style."

Choose the best revision.

A. Renaissance works varied; particular examples show classical references, observation, or new methods alongside continuing religious subjects.

B. No Renaissance artists studied older works.

C. One feature is enough to explain an entire culture.

My choice: _____ Explain why it fits:

5 Carry the idea forward.

Write a label for the fictional altarpiece using two described features. Explain how a print could spread a technique and identify evidence needed to establish actual influence.
